An inauguration for the president of Jefferson College

It has been 18 months since Nathaniel Bishop officially took the helm of Jefferson College of Health Sciences as president, but on Friday his official inauguration will be held.

The ceremony will include a recognition of Bishop's personal and professional accomplishments from the college as well as colleagues at Carilion Clinic, which owns the college, local government, representatives from organizations across the Roanoke Valley, and his family and friends.

In addition, I'm told representatives from more than 25 Virginia colleges and universities will be attending.

The event, which is being held at Greene Memorial United Methodist Church, is not open to the public.

About 600 people have been invited, plus the entire student body of nearly 1,100 and the approximately 200 faculty and staff at the college.

Bishop was first appointed interim president in April 2010, before getting the permanent appointment. Prior to that he was a vice president at Carilion.

He has a master's degree in education and a doctorate in ministry. A Christiansburg native, he has no administrative experience in higher education, but had served on numerous boards of higher education institutions.
